This power inlet box must be installed outdoors in an open area where the generator is being used. First off, I generally like the box. I would have given it a 5 if this one particular issue had not shown itself. It should only take you 5 or so minutes with a razor knife". Electrical code requires four 6 gauge conductors for 50 amp connections. This adds a little effort to the otherwise straight forward installation. Good amount of room for 6 gauge wire. I purchased this due to the poor reviews the Reliance Controls PB50 had in regards to fitting 6 gauge wire which is usually required for 50amp service. The reviews stated this product had more room. I can confirm that while it was not super easy, handling 6 gauge wire in this unit was not a major issue. You will have to bend the wires but that is the same with any inlet. The housing is indeed plastic and it does flex a bit which helps immensely with buttoning it all up after the wires are installed but once secured to a surface Side of the house in my case , the case gets nice and rigid and is extremely solid handling a 50 amp generator cord with no issue those cords are VERY heavy. One star removed because I wish they put some sort of marking on the outside of the box to tell you which direction to plug the cord in. With the inlet being under the box, you have to feel for which way the the cord should line up to the inlet box. I marked the cord and the box with a sharpie so now I just line up the markings and the cord goes right in. Solid box. Plastic is very sturdy. Punch out works fine as long as you don't need a larger hole. You shouldn't if you run 6awg wire directly in the box. If you try to use the plenum it may be too small. Too minor issues though. One is the nuts going the front cover on fall out when mounting so it's a headache to deal with. I had to put tape on them to keep in place. The top screw needs to be loose a little too for the cover to fit back on. Minor issues. What I really like is it has a ton of room for the 6 gauge wire. Now I just need to patch my dry wall. I had to hang it high because my fuse box only had empty punch out spots on top and the side has studs on both sides. But it's nice having it high. Kids won't play with it and I can see how to plug in the cable. Images in this review. Works flawlessly. I have a very large and heavy 50 amp generator cord. This box holds the cord in place very well even though the cord plugs into the bottom of the box and quite a bit of the cord's weight is pulling down on the plug. I was concerned that this would be a problem and it isn't. There is plenty of room inside the box to connect four 6 electrical wires. The lid fits very well and makes everything rain proof. My only complaint is the knockouts for connecting the conduit. After a couple of minutes of reeming with my drill bit I was able to get the fitting it with no problem. It's nice to know that I no long need to worry about power outages. See all reviews. Top reviews from other countries. Translate all reviews to English. Report abuse Translate review to English.
